Chancellor disavows need for education PAC

By Toby Eckert
Staff Writer

As colleges and universities recently have fallen victim to state and federal budget cuts, many higher education lobbyists have called for the formation of a higher education political action committee.

But many college and university officials are less than enthusiastic about PACs, which funnel money to election campaigns in hopes of securing favorable positions on lawmakers' agendas.

Chancellor Lawrence Pettit counts himself among the latter.

"Democracy is really threatened if public decisions on the allocation of resources are controlled by the highest bidding," Pettit said. "Rather than try to buy into a corrupt system of campaign financing, we should remember our role as the conscience of society and provide our expertise on reform of the system."

"I think something as inherently good as higher education should not have to depend on payouts for political support."

But John Jackson, a political scientist and dean of the College of Liberal Arts, says that if higher education is going to have a fair chance in the grab for state and federal dollars, it must adjust to the times.

The number of PACs has grown from 40 or 50 in the mid-1970s to more than 4,000 today, Jackson said, and their political muscle is significant.

"The unorganized have a very hard time getting a hearing in America today," he said. "Anything we can do to bring our case first to the American people and then to the attention of the legislators ought to be undertaken."

Pettit's and Jackson's dif-

White House next stop for defense bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An arms control-laced $296 billion defense authorization bill won final legislative approval in the Senate Thursday and went to President Reagan, who is expected to sign it before the superpower summit.

The massive bill, adopted on a 86-9 vote after nearly six hours of debate, was approved the night before in the House, 264-158.

"I am hoping and expect that the president would sign this bill," Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., head of the Senate Armed Services Committee, told the Senate. "I don't doubt some (provisions) would not be popular in the White House."

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas urged the Senate to accept the measure "as the best compromise possible," despite reservations about parts of the 17 1/2-pound, foot-high report of a panel that worked out differences between the initial House and Senate versions.

Reagan, who all summer threatened to veto the bill, was expected to sign it to avoid a bitter fight over a veto override as next month's summit approaches. Reagan is expected to sign a medium-range missile pact with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev at the summit.

The chief floor opposition came from conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who said that in both the SDI and SALT 2 provisions Reagan's "hands are in a practical sense tied behind his back at the very moment he must face the Russians."

"The anti-defense lobby of unilateral disarmers achieved the substance of their unilateral restraints on the United States," Helms protested.

Rea decides not to seek Gray's seat

By Deedra Lawhead
Staff Writer

State Rep. Jim Rea will stay close to home despite encouragement to run for Rep. Ken Gray's 22nd District seat in the U.S. House.

Rea, D-Christopher, announced Thursday he will run for re-election to the Illinois House from the 117th District.

Rea said he had received encouragement to run for Congress from throughout the 22nd District and about $150,000 in commitments for campaign funds, but "it boiled down to, 'Where can I do the best for Southern Illinois?'"

Although Rea said his 20 years of public service and 10 years of legislative experience made him the most qualified to carry on Gray's "pork barrel" tradition, his seniority in the Illinois House was more important.

State Sen. Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, announced his candidacy for Gray's seat last week.

Smokeout bombs in Carbondale

By Amy Gaubatz
Staff Writer

The American Cancer Society's 11th Great American Smokeout had little impact on smokers in Carbondale Thursday.

In an informal survey of about 25 smokers, most said they did not know about the smokeout and weren't planning to quit anyway.

"I just found out about it this morning," David Gildersleeve, a sophomore in electrical engineering, said. Gildersleeve, who said he has been smoking for five years, said he had participated in the smokeout last year, and "it wasn't bad."

Rich Hall, a freshman in photography, said, "A girl I know in Chicago told me about it, but I thought it was just at her school. I hadn't heard anything about it down here." Hall, who has been smoking for one year, said he would have participated if he had known about it and "if someone else did it."

Bill Hasty, a sophomore in computer science who has been smoking for two years, said he also did not know about it, but that if he had known, he would have participated.

"I think there wasn't nearly enough publicity as there usually is," Sue Warren, graduate assistant for the Student Health Assessment Center, said. The Student Health Assessment Center had a table in the Student Center, Thursday, where they handed

New Zealand is 1st on slate

The men's basketball team plays the New Zealand national team in an exhibition game at 7:35 tonight at the Arena.

So far, the New Zealand team has not found America to be the land of opportunity. The team lost six straight games after a victory against Whittier College, a Division III California school, in its first game. New Zealand has not received much in the line of southern hospitality, recording losses to Southwest Texas, Texas-San Antonio, Sam Houston, Texas-Arlington, Kentucky Wesleyan and Tennessee Tech.

Still, the Salukis are taking the game seriously even though it will not count on the season record.

"We don't consider this an exhibition game," Saluki coach Rich Herrin said. "We're not going to just play everybody. We'll play the guys we think can help us win the basketball game. So it's just like an opener to us."

Kai Nurnberger will start at point guard with Steve Middleton at shooting guard. Randy House will play small forward and Todd Krueger will be at power forward. Center Tim Richardson anchors the lineup. All but Krueger started a season ago.

Judging by the scores of New Zealand's last six games, all of the Salukis could see some action. New Zealand has lost by an average score of 73-58 in those games.

Causes of the lopsided margins have been poor rebounding and turnovers, according to sports information directors from Sam Houston, Kentucky Wesleyan and Tennessee Tech.

Frank Mulvihill and Byron Vaetoe start at guard for New Zealand's coach Bob Bishop. Ian Webb and Glen Denham start at forward. Gilbert Gordan plays center.

The game will feature two hot-shooting guards. Vaetoe has scored 53 points in the last two games, while Middleton averaged 19 points per game last season.

Herrin expects the Salukis to push the ball up the court whenever possible, provided they can control the boards, which is a possibility. During the last four games, New Zealand was out-rebounded by an average of nine rebounds per game.

Herrin said the exhibition will enable the Salukis to get rid of opening-game jitters.

Scott's cagers vie for win in opener

The Saluki women's basketball team starts its 1987-88 campaign against the Georgia Lady Bulldogs Saturday Nov. 28 at the Amana-Hawkeye Classic in Iowa City, Iowa.

This is the first time the Salukis have opened the season at a tournament and it could be the key to snapping the team's habit of losing the first game. The Salukis have lost five-straight season openers.

"We don't worry about that, but we're due. I don't know if it's bad luck to win the first game, but we would like to start our winning streak even earlier," Julie Beck, assistant coach, said.

Last year Georgia, a Southeastern Conference powerhouse, put together a 27-5 record and finished second in the SEC with a 7-2 record. The Lady Bulldogs were upset by Iowa in the NCAA Midwest Regionals, but still finished the season ranked sixth by the Associated Press.

Georgia is ranked anywhere from fifth to 14th nationally in preseason polls despite the fact that coach Andy Landers only has one returning starter from last year's squad. Landers' key losses are Katrina McClain, a three-time All-America selection and 1987 National Player of the Year, and Barbara Bootz, a 6-foot-7-inch center.

However, Landers landed what is considered to be the top recruiting class in the nation, according to Off The Glass magazine, by signing three

Sinou after top-10 finish in NCAA finals

By Jim Black

Senior distance star Vivian Sinou will try to become SIU-C's first cross country All-America at the NCAA national finals Monday in Charlottesville, Va.

The 25 top finishers at the meet will be named All-America.

"My goal is to become an All-America, but ideally I want to be in the top 10," Sinou said after qualifying last Saturday at the NCAA regionals. Sinou, who was unbeaten this season going into the regionals, finished third at the regional meet.

Coach Don DeNoon is equally optimistic. "I think the odds are that she's going to be in the top 15," DeNoon said.

DeNoon said Sinou had an excellent week of training in preparation for the finals.

"We've been cutting mileage down and increasing intensity," DeNoon said.

"I've been training really well," Sinou said. "I feel

GVC-bound spikers look to salvage season

The women's volleyball team has one slim chance to salvage its season.

SIU-C takes on top-seeded Northern Iowa in the first round of the Gateway Conference Tournament at 7 p.m. Friday in Cedar Falls, Iowa. The tournament champion advances to the NCAA tournament.

The Salukis are a dark horse. At 15-17, the team has lost five of its last six matches.

Northern Iowa is 32-4 this year, sweeping all nine Gateway matches. Only Drake and Southwest Missouri forced the Panthers to play a fourth game.

The Panthers dominated SIU-C from the outset on Oct. 31, winning 15-6, 15-5, 15-7.

"Our play really hasn't jelled," Saluki coach Debbie Hunter said. "For our part we must remain focused on team design. We need a couple of players to come back with their best match play of this year."

"We'll play with a controlled, reckless abandon. To be competitive we need our best match of the year. To win, we have to play over our heads."

Service reception had been a weakness for Northern Iowa early on, but coach Iragde Ahrabi-Fard said she is not concerned. The team has improved, she said.

"No one in the last 10 matches has been able to dominate with serving," Ahrabi-Fard said. "I don't have a weak receiver anymore."

Offensively, five Panthers are ranked in the Gateway's top 10 for hitting percentage. Mary Bernhardt, gunning for conference player of the year, leads at .333. Maryellen McCann, Kris Schroeder, Shawna Hutchins and Bobbi Becker are close behind.

No Salukis are among the top conference hitters.

Bernhardt is the key. Hunter said it is impossible to muzzle the senior setter, yet the Salukis must find a way. The Northern Iowa offense hinges entirely on her.

"When she's in the front of the 5-1 offense we can still have three hitters," Ahrabi-Fard said. "She's very clever. If anyone tries to key on her she will draw the block away."

Hunter said, "It's not

Communist rebels held for murders in Philippines

ANGELES CITY, Philippines (UPI) — Police filed murder charges Thursday against 19 members of a communist rebel cell that authorities believe planned and executed the Oct. 28 killings of three Americans near the U.S. Clark Air Base. Authorities had four of the 19 in custody, including three who police said have agreed to testify against their comrades. Police hope to catch more in the next few days, said police Maj. Efren Alamares.

Iraq hits Iranian nuclear power plant again

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — Iraqi warplanes defied Iran's warning of "another Chernobyl" radiation disaster Thursday and attacked an unfinished nuclear power plant on the Iranian coast for the third time in three days, Tehran radio reported. Three hours after the 10:15 a.m. strike on the plant in the port of Bushehr, Iraqi warplanes attacked two oil tankers serving Iran's offshore terminals in the northern Persian Gulf.

Officials evacuate 30 people into subway fire

LONDON (UPI) — Survivors of the subway fire that killed at least 30 people said Thursday officials directing evacuation efforts unwittingly sent them up an escalator toward the heart of the blaze that engulfed the station in smoke and concrete-splitting heat. A top fire officer said an automatic sprinkler system, recommended after another subway fire injured 14 three years ago, could have helped save lives but none was installed at the station.

Stock prices fall in several world markets

Stock prices fell on most world markets Thursday, succumbing to pressure from a sharp appreciation of the Japanese yen against the dollar and the delay of an accord on the U.S. budget deficit. Budget negotiators, in their 19th day of private talks Thursday, insisted they are close to agreement and will beat the Friday deadline by producing a package that exceeds the required $23 billion in deficit reductions.

Schultz to meet with Shevardnadze in Geneva

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz will meet in Geneva next week with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze to make final preparations for next month's superpower summit, U.S. officials said Thursday. The two-day meeting will be announced by the State Department Friday, said administration officials, who requested anonymity.

North was to use Panama military in operation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver North planned to enlist the Panamanian military in sabotage actions against the Sandinista government in Nicaragua, according to the congressional Iran-Contra report. The covert operation, which would have required a presidential finding, was only one of many such activities being planned by White House officials last year when North's secret network was exposed, investigators found.

Mr. Rogers visits Soviet children's TV show

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Mister Rogers" and his Soviet counterpart extended Glasnost to children's television Thursday, unveiling a show they taped together for Soviet viewers and announcing a similar visit to "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" next week. Ancient Chinese cures practiced

Acupuncture works, says technician

By Laura Mil'oreth
Staff Writer

Although many Americans may dismiss the use of acupuncture and Chinese herbal medicine as remedies for curing illness, the Chinese hold them in high regard and will use them before trying modern medicine, a University medical technologist said.

Muriel Narve was one of 17 medical professionals in the nation chosen to attend a three-week medical exchange in the People's Republic of China in September and October. The participants were chosen for the program by the National Institute of Health in Washington, D.C.

Through her visits to Chinese clinics, hospitals and medical schools and while attending and giving presentations, Narve learned about the Chinese people and their ancient medical techniques.

THE CHINESE people were very open-minded and inquisitive when meeting the Americans, Narve said. "They were very interested in some of our testing procedures, but they always use their traditional medicine before they go on to Western medicine."

Acupuncture, the process of placing needles on specific areas of the body to relieve pain and induce healing, is a common practice in China, Narve said.

She explained that another method the Chinese use for healing is herbal medicine consisting of natural ingredients such as seaweed, dried sea horse, pearl powder and other plant and animal parts. These components are mixed into a potion that serves as a medication.

"Acupuncture and Chinese herbal medicine have been going on for 2,000 years," Narve said. "Their use is common practice there. But I was a skeptic as far as this type of medicine goes. I took very little stock in it because of my medical training."

HOWEVER, AFTER seeing firsthand the high regard in which these methods were held, Narve became a believer herself.

"There was absolute, complete respect for the herbalists who were mixing the potions," Narve said as she described the attitude of the Chinese who go to herbal medicine shops.

"People came in and described their symptoms to the physician who wrote out the herbal medicine prescription and sent it to the herbalist. He mixed the potion and the people either went home to brew it and drink it or else it was in some sort of tablet form," she said.

Narve explained that some of the herbal remedies are simply natural forms of our own modern medicine.

"We manufacture antibiotics by a company. We start out with a plant and then we make it synthetically," Narve said. "These people still use the plant for treatment."

"THEY BREW up the same thing, but they go out and pick the plant, whereas we give our people a tablet that has been manufactured," she explained.

Narve said she saw doctors treating patients in hospitals with herbal medicine. Potions are often used to treat people who have suffered a heart attack, she said.

The techniques of acupuncture and herbal medicine are taught to students in Chinese medical schools and often the potions are passed down through families, generation after generation, she said.

"Some of my feelings and attitudes toward Chinese medicine changed from seeing the results, seeing the system and seeing the people," Narve said.

She cited one example she saw in China when a hyperactive young boy was taken to his doctor for an acupuncture treatment.

"He was running around screaming. He could hardly sit still," Narve said. "But after the needles were inserted there seemed to be no problem. He sat down, talked to his father and seemed to be completely at ease."

THESE KINDS of healing effects are commonplace in China and the people there do not look upon them in awe as Americans might, Narve said. "They don't talk about it as a miracle cure because for them it is accepted, like an antibiotic."

The experience in China gave Narve a new perspective on the Chinese way of life and how it differs from American culture.

"They have very little in China. There is very little wealth," Narve said. "They are very proud of simple things, such as a camera."

Some lots closed to student vehicles for break

Be careful where you park your vehicle on campus during Thanksgiving and Christmas breaks because it may get ticketed and towed, Marilyn Hogan, campus parking manager, said.

- Five, north of Woody Hall;
- Six, north of Morris Library and west of Faner Hall;

- Seven, north of Pullum Hall;

—39, off Lincoln Drive between the Agriculture Building and Lawson Hall;

—And as posted.

However, after 4 p.m., students may park in these lots, according to the University vehicle regulations manual.

The designated red parking area in lot five, which is the meter lot north of Woody Hall, will also be closed for repairs because the soil is washing away from the meters, Hogan said.

Lots one, six and 39 have been closed for vehicles with red parking stickers for 20 years, but lots two, three, five and seven will be off limits for red stickered vehicles for the first time during breaks, she said.

"We added those lots because faculty and staff complained that they were paying $30 and the lots were filling up during break forcing them to park further away and walk," Hogan said.

Second chance is one worth risking

THE SECOND-CHANCE proposal awaiting approval of the SIU-C administration is an innovative and beneficial idea.

The proposal, which offers academic amnesty to students who were issued educational pink slips soon after the education began, would allow some students who are at least 24 years old to re-enter school with a clean academic slate. Students who could return include those with less than a 2.0 grade point average and earned less than 60 semester hours.

The thinking behind the proposal is sound. An 18-year-old student who flunked out of school probably did so because he or she was unable to harness the discipline necessary to academically succeed — or even survive. For some, the necessity to ignore college's many social diversions is too great a task. In many instances, a student's liver isn't the only thing damaged in the easily misdirected first semesters of his or her college career: the grade point average also takes a beating.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN the mental makeup of an 18-year-old student and a 24-year-old student is marked, hence the need for the age requirement. By stipulating a relatively advanced age (at least for college students) for readmission, the second chance policy would provide for a maturing period. For many former students, being given three or four years to reflect and mature undoubtedly would make the difference between collegiate failure and success.

Revisions made on the original proposal were needed. In the first publicized draft, the second chance would not have applied to dishonorably discharged veterans. Why the University would be in a position to pass moral judgment on a generalized segment of the population — much less involve itself in military affairs — is a mystery.

As it now stands, the second chance proposal offers a unique opportunity to those students who left the University under adverse academic conditions. Receiving a college education, like any other aspect of life, entails a degree of failure. Mercy and forgiveness also should be part of the living process, and SIU-C would display some heart by forgiving those errant students from the past.

Opinions from elsewhere

The Kansas City Times

Despite all the self-congratulatory hoopla in Cincinnati by the professional hucksters of a national anti-pornography organization, their campaign in Kansas City must be seen as a failure. It was a failure because it was basically dishonest.

The S.T.O.P. (Stand Together Opposing Pornography) effort used the emotional device of holding forth the crime of child abuse, and then claimed that the cause was video tapes sold and rented in stores. This is akin to soliciting money for a phony cancer cure. It does not attack the real problem and it drains resources away from the agencies that can and do.

The pornography fund-raisers claim they extracted several hundred thousand dollars from the community and say this was proof of their success. This was money raised from good but gullible people through scare tactics, distorted advertising and carnival-barker techniques. Now this 1980s tent show will move on to other cities, presumably apply the same Jim-and-Tammy methods and TV commercials in the vein of R-rated horror film promotions.

The S.T.O.P. campaign in Kansas City was a failure in many ways. But perhaps not by the measure of its professional promoters. That measure is money.

Sudden death and faked orgasms: survey reveals ugly male options

BY NOW, most people know about the furor created by Harry Hyte, the sex researcher who wrote the controversial best-seller saying that most men are unhappy and women are to blame.

Mr. Hyte was in town recently and we got together to discuss his book, "Men and Love: Boy, Am I a Miserable Guy!"

Mr. Hyte, the thrust of the research in your book is that 98 percent of all adult heterosexual males are unhappy and unfulfilled in their relationships with women. Some critics find that statistic unbelievable.

"What do critics know? Most of them are wimps, and wimps like being abused. So they're the 2 percent who are satisfied because it makes them happy to be treated like dirt."

But what is it that makes men so unhappy about their relationships with women?

"There are a lot of reasons. You want to start with sex?"

YES, WHAT does your research show on that subject?

"Most of the men I interviewed said that the trouble with women is that all they think about is sex. They don't appreciate a man for his other qualities, how good a bowler he is, or that he's a decent guy who always carries jumper cables. It's like one of my subjects said: 'Women — they're only interested in one thing...'"

But isn't that part of a relationship?

"Sure. But a guy gets up in the morning, goes to work, puts in a hard day for that paycheck, goes home in rush-hour traffic. He's tired. He just wants to have a drink, eat, maybe relax in front of the TV for a little while, get a good night's sleep. But does she let him do that? No, as soon as his head hits that pillow, she's giving him an elbow in the ribs. That's why so many men fake it."

Fake what?
"My research shows that 82 percent of all men fake having an orgasm."

THAT'S AN astonishing figure.

"If you think that's astonishing, then let me give you another one. Do you know what the fourth highest cause of sudden death among men is in this society? I'll tell you what it is: Men suffering cardiac arrest because they were awake half the night trying to make the woman have an orgasm."

I find that hard to believe.

"Happens all the time. Take some average guy, all worn out from trying and trying, and he looks at the clock and says: 'Holy cow, I got to be up for work in two hours.' Bam, the big punch in the chest. Another victim of female lust."

You're saying that women drive men to an early grave through sex?

"Are you kidding? Haven't you read any of the studies that show that men die a lot earlier than women? And it's not just sex."

THEY HAVE other lethal methods?

"Sure. You ever watch women eat in a restaurant? What do they order? A little chicken salad. A little tuna salad. Or just a regular salad, and hold the dressing."

That's a sensible diet.

"Yeah. But when they get home, what do they cook for the unsuspecting stiff? Pot roast with gravy. Fried chicken. Pork chops. They shoot 'em up with cholesterol. Clog up those arteries. Take a little longer, but it's as effective as arsenic and it's legal."

You make it sound like a homicidal plot.

"I can only tell you what my research shows. Then there are the 81 percent of men who say they are the victims of emotional violence."

IN WHAT form?

"The silent or deep-freeze treatment. He tries to communicate, to relate, to make emotional contact. But what does she do? She gives him the cold stare. And he doesn't even know why. It might be that he forgot it was Sweetest Day or he had a drink after work and missed his regular train. So for days, it's the deep freeze. And that leads to nervousness, hypertension. His blood pressure goes up, his stomach hurts, he hyperventilates. And then, wham..."

This is all very interesting. But the critics question the scientific validity of your methodology. They suspect that your data may have been gathered from a narrow base.

"Nonsense. I interviewed legions of men."

Where?
"Where else? At my Legion post."

Viewpoint extolled mock-liberal political environment of the '80s

The mock-hippie and mock-liberal political climate these days is taking all the fun out of college life. Mary Caudle's viewpoint on Tuesday summarized my worst fear, that liberalism on campus today has degenerated into nothing more than self-indulgence.

Both aspects of this generation's political positioning have marked it as the least significant and most discardable political movement in American history. Our generation will be a blemish on the history books, if it's mentioned at all.

Caudle implies that the only true experience and mark of true values involves drug use and making foolish mistakes. I probably would laugh if this were the battlecry of one individual, but it is not.

This idea permeates every fiber of the new campus lefties. This is one of the most shallow political doctrines since Adolf Hitler descended upon the Jews.

The new lefty ideology fails to recognize anything outside itself as having any value. It puts arbitrary labels on anything that does not conform to its opinions.

These labels are wrong; just because I choose not to smoke pot does not make me a selfish, conniving element of the Reagan era. Just because I care about my physical well-being does not make me a shallow body slave.

If being a liberal means having to live a decadent life of drug use and junk food, well then, sorry, guess that makes me a conservative. I guess that actually doing things for other people rather than indulging myself makes me a slave of the Reagan era in Caudle's eyes.

Decadence and self-indulgence are the trademarks of the new liberalism, and this is frightening. Whatever happened to the days when being liberal meant more than passing the bong between a couple of guys?

I guess since I care about others, I can not call myself a liberal anymore. Oh well. — Peter Soliunas, sophomore, English.

Students deserve an explanation from USO for an overdue 1987-88 student directory

The semester is almost over and the 1987-88 student directory has yet to be distributed to the students.

When the students got back from summer vacation, they were looking for their old friends' phone numbers and addresses, in the hope of getting together with them.

Without the student directory, students had to go to the Information Desk at the Student Center to look for an address or phone number from the one and only bulky computer printout, which is very inconvenient.

After 13 weeks of school, some of the lucky students have met their "lost" friends by chance on campus and personally asked them their addresses and phone numbers. Unfortunately, the students with busy schedules hardly have any chance to meet their old pals on campus.

The Undergraduate Student Organization is responsible for the bad timing. The production cost of the student directory in 1986 was more than $20,000.

With only one semester remaining this school year, is the student directory still worthwhile for the students?

A huge amount of time and money has been involved in this project. If it is just for the remaining semester, perhaps the USO administration should explain the delay to the SIU-C students, instead of just letting time go by. — C. Chong, senior.

Argument against a U.S. nuclear freeze as 'war scare propaganda' lacked reason

For some time now, I have found it interesting to read the Daily Egyptian editorial page and observe classic examples of people confusing their beliefs, which are founded on emotional investment, with logical reasoning.

The recent letter by Linda Nelson is a case in point. Following her convoluted argument was an unpredictable journey. I suspect her thoughts are the result of conservative views, not the outcome of careful thought.

In pronouncing that the United States would lose its desire to defend itself in the state or a nuclear freeze, she failed to present a reason supporting such an assumption. She also identified the freeze movement as war scare propaganda.

Anyone not realizing that Ronald Reagan's anti-communist, "evil empire" rhetoric is the apotheosis of war scare terrorism forgot to wake up from his coma this morning.

Nelson decried the faith component of the people in the nuclear freeze movement. Did she ever consider that some people who are trying to live out what they interpret to be the Gospel values of peace and justice might be interested in something like the nuclear freeze movement?

Her notion that communism tried to identify itself with Christianity is plain ignorance. Nelson should spend more time reading Marx, and less time watching the Smurfs.

Finally, Nelson drops the ever-popular scriptural quote. I find scriptural quotes inane. For most positions that someone supports with a quote, I can find a quote supporting the exact opposite position. — Pete Zachar, graduate student, psychology.

Movie Guide

Baby Boom — (Fox Eastgate, PG) Diane Keaton stars in a comedy about a yuppie who inherits a relative's baby girl. Also stars Sam Shepard and Harold Ramis.

Cinderella — (University Place 8, G) Walt Disney's classic animated version of the fairy tale is back in the theaters for the holidays. See it before you turn into a pumpkin.

Date With An Angel (University Place 8, PG) A young man's (Michael Knight) downtrodden life is turned around by his guardian angel (Phoebe Cates).

Death Wish IV — (Saluki, R) Charles Bronson is back for more vigilante antics.

Fatal Attraction — (Varsity, R) A woman (Glenn Close) terrorizes a married man (Michael Douglas) with whom she had a chance encounter.

Fatal Beauty — (University Place 8, R) Whoopi Goldberg stars with Sam Elliot in an action adventure yarn that has Whoopi on the trail of a deadly new drug.

Flowers in The Attic — (Varsity, PG-13) This psychodrama is an adaptation of the best-selling V.C. Andrews book about four children whose mother locks them in an attic for years.

Hello Again — (Fox Eastgate, PG) Shelley Long and Corbin Bernsen ("L.A. Law") star in a comedy about a woman who dies and comes back to life after her husband has married her best friend.

Less Than Zero — (University Place 8, R) Andrew McCarthy, Robert Downey and Jamie Gertz star in the adaptation of Bret Easton Ellis' book about rich kids getting lost in the fast lane of a drug-oriented lifestyle in Beverly Hills.

Like Father, Like Son — (University Place 8, PG-13) This comedy stars Dudley Moore as a brilliant surgeon and Kirk Cameron of "Growing Pains." The two are father and son who are switched into each other's bodies.

The Pick-up Artist — (Liberty, PG-13) Robert Downey plays a smooth-talking pick-up artist who falls in love with Molly Ringwald.

The Princess Bride — (Fox Eastgate, PG) Rob Reiner directed this comic tale based on William Goldman's book with high adventure, damsels in distress, castles and knights.

Rocky Horror Picture Show — (Town and Country Cinema, Marion, R) "Dammit Janet," this rock and roll spoof of horror films didn't meet critical acclaim when it was first released, but it has a cult following of fans that bring "props" and dress up as favorite characters. Props include toast, toilet paper, rice and fruit. Cultists will show the uninitiated viewer when and how to use them.

Running Man — (University Place 8, R) Arnold Schwarzenegger stars in a story, similar to "Roller Ball," about a fighter in violent televised games of the future.

Russkies — (University Place 8, PG) A combination of "The Boy Who Cried Wolf" and "The Russians Are Coming, The Russians Are Coming." After driving their parents crazy by playing war games, a trio of kids find a wounded Russian sailor washed up on shore, but nobody believes them.

Suspect — (Saluki, R) Cher and Dennis Quaid team up in a mystery thriller set in Washington, D.C.

Teen Wolf 2 — (University Place 8, PG) The teenager considered to be an ordinary kid, returns in this sequel of the 1985 movie which starred Michael J. Fox. Jason Bateman fills the hairy role in this outing where the teenage werewolf goes to college.

'Miracle' could save widow from lawsuit

MILPITAS, Calif. (UPI) — A nearly blind, disabled widow who fears she may lose her home because of a legal horror over her son's muddled sale of a 1974 motorcycle has unexpectedly received what she hopes is "a miracle from God."

The state Department of Motor Vehicles belatedly found old records showing that wheelchair-bound Norma Arjo, 49, was not the legal owner of the bike after all at the time of an Aug. 28, 1983, accident that cost a man a leg.

"If this is true and something can be done, I'm ecstatic," Arjo, who was previously told the records no longer existed, said Wednesday. "It will be a miracle from God."

It was an unexpected turn of good luck because a Department of Motor Vehicles worker moved by her plight found the documents in a rarely visited department archive. The papers transferring ownership from her escaped destruction, usual after three years, only because of an unrelated legal case.

The break could mean her home will not have to go on the sheriff's auction block to pay a $116,000 court default judgment over the motorcycle accident she and her family were not even involved in.

"This could make an enormous difference," her attorney, Gen Fujioka, of the county Legal Aid Society, said. "A judge could, and hopefully would, reopen consideration of Norma's liability based on this new evidence."

Arjo, a diabetic mother of four, was hit by a default judgment in March 1986 because she neglected to respond to a suit against her by Gary Warner, a passenger on the 1974 Yamaha, when the new owner, Loran Titler, crashed it into a truck.

She had believed she was no longer responsible for the motorcycle because her 17-year-old son, Steven, sold it to Titler two weeks before the accident.

History exhibit to close

The Architectural History of Southern Illinois Exhibition at the University Museum in Faner Hall will close Nov. 30.

The exhibit focuses on the vernacular architecture in more than 20 Southern Illinois ethnic communities of French, German, Eastern European, Black-American, Italian and Anglo-American heritage.

Some of the communities represented are: Prairie du Rocher and Modoc with French heritage; Waterloo, Maestown, Bartleson, Gormantown, Columbia and Piopolis with German heritage; DuBois, Radom and Posen with Polish heritage; and Royaltown, Dowell and Colp with Czechoslovakian heritage.

Other cities in the exhibit are Cairo, Mounds and Mounds City with African-American heritage; Herrin with Italian heritage; and Elizabethtown, Gokonda, Anna, Jonesboro and Herod with Anglo-American heritage.

A book, "Vernacular Architecture in Southern Illinois: The Ethnic Heritage," based upon the research and photographs included in the exhibit, will be released by the SIU Press in the spring. The publication will be partially funded by the University Museum Associates.

The book will include more than 150 photographs by Randy Tindall with descriptive text. Co-authors of the book are John M. Coggeshall and Jo Anne Nast.

Poverty awareness event examines universal problem

By Amy Gaubatz
Staff Writer

One out of every five children is poor. The poor do not just live in the ghettos of New York or on the streets of Los Angeles. They are not just bums or people looking for a handout. They might be a family member or someone you know.

A newly formed group called Justice For All will be holding a poverty awareness event from 2:30 to 4 p.m. Sunday at the Good Samaritan House.

"Through this event, Justice For All is attempting to get together to show that poverty is here, growing, and worsening," said E.G. Hughes, coordinator of the group. "Poverty exists in the world, it is everywhere, and it has universal effects."

THE EVENT has two themes, "Poverty isn't a Private Affair," and "Listen to Voices of the Poor." The program is part of a national event which is being held in more than a hundred communities across the nation.

Local religious leaders and secular leaders will talk about poverty, and a people's panel will consist of single mothers, children, homeless people, farmers, handicapped people, and unemployed and part-time employees.

"We will get together with people who are poor, who have or have not benefited from the public, such as government food stamps, Medicaid, low income housing and government job training programs," Hughes said.

PEOPLE WILL talk about their experiences, economic status, and how their needs have or have not been met.

"Our expectations are colliding with changing economics. Even with education, they can't get jobs that allow them to have cars, or a house."

—E. G. Hughes

Hughes said the seminar will attempt "to dispell some of the stereotypes people have about the poor." He added that a common myth is that people are poor because "of their own doing. They are lazy, unwilling to start at the bottom and work their way up, or they won't try enough."

"That's overwhelmingly not the case," he continued. "Saying these things will only make poverty possible. They want to work and are poor for reasons that do not derive from their own failings."

ONE PROBLEM, said Hughes, is a diminishing middle class.

"Everyone thinks of themselves as middle class, but we are losing significant numbers," he said. "It's the American dream, to own a home, have money in the bank, and send your kids to school."

"Our expectations are colliding with changing economics. Even with education, they can't get jobs that allow them to have cars, or a house. It's becoming a growing reality," he added.

ADDING TO the many problems facing the poor, surplus food distributors and food pantries are running out of food, leaving many people to go hungry, said Hughes.

"Poverty in this country is immoral, outrageous and need not be," he said. "Poverty is real, and everyone knows it. A lot of people are ignoring it. It's something that we don't want to see."

The Good Samaritan House is at 701 S. Marion. Everyone attending the program are asked to bring a donation of canned goods, fresh fruits or vegetables.

Child care services proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Child care programs are too expensive and too hard for parents to find, congressmen said Thursday in proposing a $2.5 billion package to make the services available to most Americans.

The plan, being filed in the House and Senate, would increase the number of child care facilities, improve training and pay for child-care workers and would help low- and middle-income families pay for child care.

Sponsors Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., and Rep. Dale Kildee, D-Mich., said 19 senators and 125 representatives already support the package, which Dodd called "a major child care initiative, the first of its kind."

"We will put this proposal on a fast track," said Chairman Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., of the House Education and Labor Committee.

"The child care system we have now simply is not working," said Kildee, who said there is space for less than 3 million children in all of the licensed child care facilities in the country.

The average annual cost for child care is $3,000, Dodd said in listing the problems of availability, affordability and quality. There is space for only 1 in 3 children in Seattle, he said.

"Half of the towns in my home state of Connecticut lack any child care program at all," Dodd said.

President Nixon vetoed a $2 billion child-care bill in 1971 on grounds it was too expensive and anti-family. Dodd and Kildee said their bills are a recognition that reasonably priced child care is essential for many families trying to make ends meet. Affordable child care also will help families leave welfare, Dodd said. "While this is expensive, it is far less costly than a program that drains the nation of $10 billion a year paying people not to work," Dodd said.

The plan would require states to contribute an amount equal to 20 percent of what they get from the federal government. Assistance would be available to working families with incomes up to 115 percent of the state's median income. The plan also would upgrade facilities and coordinate the services offered.

The plan is backed by 90 organizations ranging from unions and professional organizations to religious groups and child development groups. Congressional backers include Assistant Democratic Senate Leader Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and House Appropriations Chairman Jamie Whitten, D-Miss.

out pamphlets and information about cancer and effects of smoking. They also showed a video "Death in the West." A sign at the table told smokers that they could put their cigarettes out in the trash can sitting beside the table.

Dave Elam, coordinator of the lifestyle program at the Wellness Center, spoke about smoking on WCIL-AM Thursday morning. The Wellness Center showed an anti-smoking film in the Student Center Thursday night.

"I think to quit smoking for one day, you have to really quit," said Annette Holder, a freshman in public relations. Holder, who did not participate in the smokeout, has been smoking for eight years, and has quit twice during that period. She said she returned to smoking because "it's fun."

"I didn't participate because I feel no reason to," said James Jurrius, a freshman with an undecided major. However, he thinks that having an annual smokeout is a good idea. "I think people should do what they want to do," he said. "If they want to smoke, then they should smoke, and if they don't want to smoke, then they shouldn't smoke."

Lynda Charles, a cook at the Baptist Student Center cafeteria, said she has been smoking since December and did not participate in the smokeout. "I didn't know about it," she said. "But I think it's a good idea — it gives a person a chance to quit." She added that had she known about the smokeout, she might have participated. "I've wanted to quit anyway," she said.

Alica Dunahee, a senior in elementary and special education, said she did not quit for the day because she didn't think about it. She has been smoking for five years.

"I'm not thinking of quitting smoking for a long time, so quitting today wouldn't make any difference," said Scott Haas, a freshman with an undecided major. Haas has been smoking for four years.

"I forgot about it," said Patrick Branham, a freshman in management. "I wouldn't have quit anyway — I don't want to go a whole day without smoking." Branham said he doesn't think the annual smokeout does much good. "The chances are that no one will quit for good after one day," he said.

Some people expressed concerns that there would be a split in the Democratic Party if Rea also had decided to run for Gray's seat, Rea said. However, he said no one told him not to run.

Rea said if he had decided to run for Gray's seat, he would have "run not against somebody, but for a position."

Rea said he may run on a statewide ticket in 1990.

Economic development such as continued use of Illinois coal will be one of Rea's priorities if he is re-elected in 1988, he said. Illinois is No. 1 in coal reserves, Rea added.

Development and marketing of tourism in Southern Illinois also is important, Rea said. Southern Illinois also needs to provide incentives to encourage businesses to locate in the area and to keep the businesses already here, he said.

If Governor James R. Thompson doesn't postpone the repayment of the $100 million loan that is due in February, 1988, the Legislature probably will look into a state income tax increase, Rea said. The original loan taken out in February to cover a revenue shortfall totaled $200 million, but the state has already paid $100 million on the debt.

Rea would not say if he would support a tax increase.

"I don't believe in making those decisions until we've got the facts there," he said.

Creative engineers sought

The National Science Foundation is having the second annual competition for its Engineering Creativity Awards.

Those who receive the award will be paid 20,000 dollars a year for three years to go to graduate school. The awards are portable and can be taken to any engineering school in the United States. The program is not open to anyone who has previously been to graduate school and the applicant must be a U.S. citizen or a resident alien by the closing date, Feb. 1, 1988.

Last year awards went to students in aerospace engineering, chemical engineering, mechanical engineering, electrical engineering, materials engineering, civil engineering and bioengineering.

Recipients were attending schools at University of Missouri at Rolla, University of Pennsylvania, University of Houston, California Institute of Technology, Cornell University, Stanford University, University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee, Clemson University, Washington University, Lehigh University, University of Iowa, Purdue University, Wichita State University, Tufts University, University of California at Berkeley and Michigan State University.

Detailed information is available at the College of Engineering and Technology dean's office.

fering views reflect a nationwide split over the desirability of forming a higher education PAC. According to the Nov. 11 issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education, many college and university administrators, like Pettit, are reluctant to support PACs because of a growing perception that they are inherently corrupt.

In addition, the administrators say a higher education PAC could not raise enough funds to compete with other PACs.

PETTIT SAID the formation of a higher education PAC would make colleges and universities "just another economic interest group." Instead of relying on campaign contributions, colleges and universities should look for other ways of influencing lawmakers, he said.

"Higher education is society's great repository of expertise, and as such we have a lot of other resources that we can share with our political friends that, in many ways, are just as important as money."

As an example, Pettit pointed to the "brain trusts" of presidents Franklin Delano Roosevelt and John F. Kennedy. The brain trusts were the young academicians who served as advisers to the presidents.

ANOTHER WAY higher education can influence lawmakers, Pettit said, is for University employees to make campaign contributions to local legislators. Pettit said he makes several personal contributions each election year on behalf of the University.

"I would rather have my money go to someone who knows it came from SIU than have a national organization give it to some congressman in Virginia who doesn't even know this institution exists," he said.

Pettit also proposed the formation of a "blue-ribbon citizens group" of prominent businessmen who can point out to lawmakers the importance of higher education to the nation's economy.

But D. Richard Petrizzo, vice president of external affairs for the College of Du Page, called the aversion to a higher education PAC naive.

"We have become acutely aware that you can't put your head in the sand and stand aloof from the political process," he said.

SIX MONTHS ago, Petrizzo said, the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges formed a political action committee to buttress its lobbying efforts in Washington.

"As we see it, only a political action committee is going to help us make our case stronger. It's part of the structure of this country. I think we either have to get with it or get out."

Jackson agreed that lobbying was not a powerful enough tool to persuade legislators to support higher education when the chips are down.

"Higher education is a lot like religion," he said. "Everybody supports it for high-flown, abstract reasons. But when it comes time to make some kind of commitment, that's a different matter."

Pettit conceded that today the way to legislators' voices may be through their wallets. "They're getting rather weary of going to bat for us again and again and not getting anything in return in the form of campaign contributions."

HOWEVER, PETTIT said that even if a higher education PAC is formed, it would have a hard time raising enough money to compete with other PACs. He noted that because colleges and universities are tax-exempt organizations and receive money from the state and federal governments, they are prohibited from participating directly in political campaigns or sponsoring PACs.

Money for a PAC would have to come from individual contributions, Pettit said. Most PACs have much more reliable sources of income, he said. Labor unions, for instance, can count on members' dues.

"Every group ought to lead with its strength," Pettit said. "If we get into the money game, we're going into a game we can't compete in or even look very good at."

Petrizzo conceded the difficulty of raising money for higher education PACs. "It's going to be tougher," he said.

JACKSON SUGGESTED that university foundations be tapped for PAC funding. However, Pettit said, in Illinois, even foundations are prohibited from making campaign contributions.

Travel tips help assure safe break

Thanksgiving break begins today and many SIU students will be traveling on the highways to home.

Students should be prepared for poor weather conditions and be aware of safe driving practices, Marilyn Hogan, campus parking manager, said.

Safe driving tips, according to Illinois Rules of the Road, include:

- Reduce your speed according to conditions. Roadway conditions may vary depending upon the sun, shade and pavement surface;

- Keep a safe distance. When road conditions are bad, increase the following distance between your vehicle and the vehicle ahead;

- Keep your windows clear. Don't start driving until your windows are defrosted and clean;

- Keep your vehicle in the best possible operating condition for winter. Make sure your vehicle's lights, breaks, windshield wipers, defroster fan and radiator are working;

- If you vehicle isn't equipped with snow tires, carry snow chains;

- Carry a shovel, heavy wollen blanket and a few candy bars for in case you are stranded;

- If you are stranded, stay inside the car and wait for someone to find you. Run the car's engines for short periods of time to give you enough heat for survival. Make sure to crack a window to avoid carbon monoxide poisoning.

Debaters take third in tournament

SIU-C's No. 1-ranked collegiate debate team finished out of the top spot for the first time this season, but continues as the best team in the country.

The debate team tied for third place with Northern Arizona University at an invitational tournament at the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. over the Nov. 12 weekend. Carroll College edged Cornell University for first-place honors.

Debate team veteran M. Scott Parsons of Wadsworth, Ohio won the tournament's first-place individual speaking award and teammate Mike Korcok of Carbondale placed third. Parsons and Korcok made up the third-place unit in team competition.

Current ratings by the national Cross Examination Debate Association list SIU-C as the nation's best squad. The team had won five straight tournaments before the loss at the Air Force Academy and has been the national CEDA champion for the past two years.

So far this season, the Parsons-Korcok team has placed first in three CEDA tournaments, second in another and third in the remaining two meets.

Parsons has three individual firsts, a second and a third to his credit. His worst showing has been a seventh place.

Placing ninth in team competition at Colorado Springs was Mark West of Bainbridge Island, Wash. and John Lapham of Seattle, Wash.

A second debate group, competing at Central State University, placed two teams in the elimination rounds.

Brian McGee of Galesburg and Bibi L. Christoff of Granite City, placed fifth and John McHale of Bartlesville, Okla. and Valeria Sulfaro of Berkeley, Mich. finished ninth. Southwest Missouri State University of Springfield, Mo., won the Oklahoma tourney.

McGee placed fifth in individual honors.

Junior varsity team members Mark N. Crislip of Wadsworth, Ohio and Chris Carey of Skokie, should have made the elimination rounds, but a scorer inadvertently marked a match they had won as a loss.

Holiday feast needs families

Local families who would like to share Thanksgiving dinner with a foreign student from the University should contact International Programs and Services.

Carla E. Coppi, a foreign student adviser, is looking for interested families and foreign students.

Exchanges of this kind have been going on for years, she said, and they help foreign students understand the American holiday.

Families and students should submit requests as soon as possible by calling 453-5774.

Students to report on park

By Robert York
Staff Writer

A University recreation class will announce community development recommendations for Fort Defiance State Park at a Cairo public meeting Nov. 30.

A park planning class taught by Douglas N. McEwen, associate professor of recreation, chose Fort Defiance as its laboratory project for the semester. The 22 students will present three development maps and three 30-page reports with suggestions for the park.

The park was claimed by Cairo residents this summer. Following its cleanup, Fort Defiance was leased from the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency for $10 for five years, beginning Nov. 1.

The students' presentation complements "Operation Enterprise," the Cairo community development program led by Richard Poston, a retired community development professor and "the doctor of sick towns."

Poston said the meeting Nov. 30, the first since the development program began, is targeted for the residents' special interests, and will invite them to join one of 18 committees to be formed.

Following suggestions from his book, "Action Now! Citizens' Guide to Better Communities," Poston said the committees will be divided into two categories: fact finding action committees and administrative committees.

The fact finding action committees will research institutions in the city, including census, environmental improvement, economic development, retail trade and services, housing, education, library, health, social welfare, and delinquency prevention.

The administrative category will be divided into three committees: secretarial, which will draw up reports for each committee; publicity, which will be responsible for keeping the residents informed of the city's activities; and block captain, which will consist of representatives from each section of the city.

The second project in "Operation Enterprise" is the promotion of a harbor split on the Mississippi River for commercial and recreational use.

McLeod to hold classic

Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" will open at McLeod Theater Dec. 2

It will play at 4:30 p.m. opening night, 8 p.m. Dec 3 to 5 and 2 p.m. Dec. 6.

The play will feature a new approach to the immortal tragedy. Elizabeth Carlin said in a press release that she directed the play with the intent of showing audiences that "you don't need a master's in English Literature to understand human relationships. There are universal issues and themes in Shakespeare's work. I wanted the issues to be revealed through the story."

A Carbondale sixth-grader, Omar Humadi, will play the role of Balthazar, one of Romeo's friends. Balthazar's role "is to tag along with Romeo, Mercutio and the guys, and he is the one who brings the news of Juliet's death to Romeo," Humadi said in a press release.

Humadi has been acting since he was six years old. His first part was in the Department of Theater's "Oliver!" five years ago. Since then, he has starred in "Tom Sawyer" at Lincoln Junior High, "The Invisible Dragon," and "The Christmas Carol."

Tickets for the play are $3 for students. Non-student prices are $5 for Thursday and Sunday performances and $6 for Friday and Saturday performances. Tickets for the 4:30 p.m. Dec 2 performance are $2. For ticket information, call 453-3001.

Auditions for 'Ah, Wilderness' to be held

The Jackson County Stage Company will hold auditions for the play "Ah, Wilderness," at 7 p.m. Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 at the theater, 101 N. Washington St.

Written by Eugene O'Neill, the play is the story of Nat and Essie Miller, who discover that their son Richard is studying radicalism, erotic verse and the neighbor's daughter. When efforts to squelch the romance succeed, Richard goes out to paint the town red, creating more fireworks.

There are fifteen roles available; a boy aged 10, teenagers, and young and older adults.

Production dates are Feb. 5, 6, 7, 12, 13, 14, 19, 20 and 21. For details call Archibald McLeod at 457-7602.

Fund drive exceeds goal of $20,000

WSIU's "Public Radio Days" fund drive from Nov. 7-14 topped the project's goal of $20,000.

"We had 514 callers pledge $20,710, and some pledges and checks are still coming in by mail," Mary Jane Dwyer, assistant development director at WSIU, said.

WSIU is the University's FM radio station.

The pledges more than doubled last year's effort, which brought in $10,300.

Dwyer said station staffers will decide how the money will be used.

"Some of it will have to help pay for outside programming costs, such as membership in National Public Radio and American Public Radio," she said.

"But we would like to use some money to purchase compact-disc equipment, so we can improve the crispness and clarity of our music broadcasts," she said.

The station already has some promotional discs and would like to buy some more, she said.

The station still is accepting mail pledges and donations. People making a $30 donation will receive a year's subscription to the WSIU and WSIU TV monthly program guide, "Previews." Donors of $40 also will receive a WSIU mug. Pledges may be sent to WSIU, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, Carbondale, Ill. 62901-6602.

Possible male birth control found

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Researchers at Albany Medical Center said Thursday the discovery of a protein that reduces sperm counts could lead to a male contraceptive similar to the birth control pill.

But, Lee Reichert Jr., chairman of Albany Medical College's biochemistry department and co-discoverer of the protein, cautioned it will take years of tests to determine if the protein is effective and safe as a contraceptive for humans.

Experiments with the protein have so far been conducted only in laboratories on animal cells, Reichert said.

"It's a big if," Reichert said, adding that before any tests could begin "a tremendous amount of preliminary work has to be done first so that any risk involved is minimal."

AIDS claims intimidate sex partners

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — AIDS counselors say a new form of sexual abuse is being reported with greater frequency — people terrorizing their sex partners by telling them they have acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Counselors in the Fort Worth area said Wednesday that some people are seeking screening tests because partners have sadistically suggested after sex that they may have transmitted the AIDS virus.

"It's really sick stuff," counselor Steve Vessels said. "People come in terrified. They say they know the guy was kidding, but what if he's not? They can't be sure. It tortures them."

One psychotherapist called the threats "the same kind of power, degradation and sadistic things that are involved in rape."

"To induce the fear that you have been exposed to something that can kill you is kind of the ultimate threat," said Thomas Bruner, who counsels AIDS patients and those who have tested positive for exposure to the virus but have not developed the disease.

Because AIDS testing is anonymous and confidential, there are no statistics on the prevalence of the threats, but Vessels said he has seen four or five women and one man in the last three months who said they received such threats after sex.

All of them tested negative for AIDS infection, he said.

Cigar-smoking 'sweetheart' swindles elderly

ARLINGTON, Va. (UPI) — The "sweetheart swindler," a dumpy, balding, middle-aged man suspected of using romance to con women out of their money across the country, has struck again in the nation's capital.

Police in at least eight states say the man has wooed between 15 and 20 women in their 40s into turning over thousands of dollars to him and then leaves them, the Journal News reported Thursday.

He meets his victims in singles bars, through "lonely hearts" ads in magazines, and in the case of his latest mark, through an ad she placed seeking a roommate.

He moved in with the 41-year-old Arlington woman last month, and within days convinced her that he could straighten out her troubled finances.

After writing her a $20,000 check from a phony corporation he claimed to own, he convinced the woman to give him $4,800 in cash to invest for her in a "high-yield" fund in New York.

Cash blends rock, country

By Richard Nunez
Staff Writer

Bluegrass, country and rock 'n' roll music rambled into Carbondale when Rosanne Cash and the Wamble Mountain Ramblers performed Wednesday night at Shryock Auditorium.

Cash, who says she defies musical labeling, proved her point by playing music that ranged from hard driving rock 'n' roll to soft ballads. Most all of her songs, however, were tinged with a country flavor.

Cash opened her set with the hard driving "She Got It All" and followed with her softer "Seven Year Ache," which went to No. 1 on the country charts in 1981.

Shryock Auditorium proved to be almost acoustically perfect for Steuart Smith's brilliant guitar work and Cash's ballads.

After a series of soft ballads, Cash delved into "My Baby Thinks He's a Train," her first of three songs about trains, which is a subject made most popular by her father Johnny Cash.

Smith provided a blazing, locomotive background with his guitar, complete with train whistles and chugging chords. He also provided a brilliant, bluesy guitar solo to "I Don't Have to Crawl," which commanded a series of whoops and hollers from several audience members.

One of the highlights of Cash's performance included an updated '80s version of her father's "Tennessee Flat Top Box," in which she felt intrigued by the idea of a woman telling the story of a young man who is about to rise to fame with his guitar playing.

Opening for Cash was the Wamble Mountain Ramblers, a Southern Illinois band that takes its name from Saline County's Wamble Mountain, the highest peak in Illinois.

The Ramblers played traditional bluegrass and gospel music, with a lineup consisting of two banjos, a fiddle, a mandolin, a stand-up bass and an acoustic guitar.

Their music was fine, but two gospel songs the band performed were unintentionally humorous.

In "I'm Using My Bible for a Road Map," band members sang that they use "the 12 disciples as road signs" and that "they'll be no detours in Heaven."

During their last song, "Keep on the Firing Line," they sang that "you must fight, be brave, against all evil," but one of the banjo players must have fought too hard, because he broke a string and had to remain on the sidelines throughout the rest of the performance.

Meese sees nothing new in committee report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Edwin Meese dismissed Thursday the congressional Iran-Contra report as "Monday morning quarterbacking" that turned up little more than his own much-criticized inquiry nearly a year ago.

Meese, talking with reporters before addressing an American Bar Association panel, said of the 690-page report released Wednesday, "No, I don't think there is anything much new there."

He later asserted to the breakfast meeting of lawyers that his own inquiry over the weekend of Nov. 21, 1986, had turned up most of the relevant facts about the secret arms sales to Iran and diversion of proceeds to the Contras.

One of the most interesting things about the congressional report, Meese said after the attorneys gave him a standing ovation, was, "The facts that came out were essentially the same as what we announced on November 25, after three days of inquiry."

Meese was strongly criticized in the report for that initial probe, particularly because once he found evidence of the diversion in a memorandum in Lt. Col. Oliver North's files, Meese stopped interviewing key figures with anyone else present and took no notes.

"The facts speak for themselves," Meese said. "I think it probably was a great job of Monday morning quarterbacking."

"I think it was probably a great job of Monday morning quarterbacking."

—Edwin Meese

Asked again if he considered resigning, he said, "No, I think that's silly."

But Meese declined to discuss more serious charges leveled by the select House-Senate panels — that he authorized an illegal Drug Enforcement Administration ransom mission that tried to get American hostages out of Lebanon with private money, or that he may have tried to cover it up.

"That's a totally different question, and I'm not going to comment," Meese said.

A spokesman for Meese said the attorney general stood by his July testimony to the committees that he did not recall authorizing any such operation.

Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said Meese and H. Ross Perot — the wealthy Texan who at North's request put up the ransom money — had never discussed the million-dollar hostage rescue attempt.

The committee report, the $4 million product of more than 11 months of investigation, said Meese's telephone logs showed contact with Perot in 1985, and one phone call Nov. 26, 1986, the day after Meese announced discovery of the diversion scheme at a dramatic White House news conference.

Perot told The Washington Post that he "never had any conversation with the attorney general about the hostages," and he did not know if Meese had personally approved the operation, though he assumed it was approved "all the way up the line."

Eastland said the report's characterization of a brief note from Meese aide John Richardson "to check on whether (Perot) would respond that the attorney general knew of or authorized the payments" was inaccurate.

NOW calls nominee 'sexist'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Organization for Women denounced Supreme Court nominee Andrew Kennedy as a "sexist" foe of women's rights Thursday and said he is as objectionable a choice as the recently-rejected Robert Bork.

NOW President Molly Yard cited Kennedy's decision in a major women's pay equity case, his ambiguous views on the right to privacy, his civil rights decisions and his membership until recently in an all-male club as the main reasons the organization decided to call for the Senate to reject him.

Speaking at a news conference, Yard said these and other actions by Kennedy, 51, a Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals judge in Sacramento, Calif., show that he is a sexist.

"It is totally unacceptable for a sexist to sit on the Supreme Court," Yard said.

Until now, beer this real came only from a keg.

Draft beer is as real as beer gets. Since it's not heat-pasteurized, heat can't change its rich, smooth, real taste.

Miller Genuine Draft is as real as that. It's not heat-pasteurized like most other beers in bottles and cans. Instead, it's cold-filtered so it's as rich and smooth as only real draft beer can be.

As real as it gets.

International Bazaar offers world of choices

By Susan Curtis
Staff Writer

The two small rooms tucked away in the back of an art gallery look almost like a museum displaying colorful wonders from around the world.

The International Bazaar, in the back of the Associated Artists Gallery at 213 South Illinois Ave. is a different kind of business venture.

International students who bring items with them from their home countries can display and sell them at the bazaar. The shop also is staffed and managed by international students.

The bazaar has been open since November 1986. Cynthia Hallium, graduate student in economics from Indonesia and the store manager, said. The six students who work there are partners in the business and "planned together and worked things from scratch," she said.

All of the student workers are economics majors and it's part of a learning experience for them, Hallium said.

Robert Ellis, professor of economics and owner of the shop, came up with the idea for the shop about a year and a half ago. He and his wife decided to open the shop.

Ellis said he thought that as a college professor he could do something to help international students sell the items they bring over.

Students set the prices for the items they bring in and make money when they are sold, Delores Ellis said.

There is a large market for the type of items they bring, such as native clothing.

jewelry and other souvenirs, Robert Ellis said. "It's always a treat to buy all the nice arts and crafts at reasonable prices," he said.

Students have the experience of running a shop, which is an outlet for many of them, Ellis said.

Occasionally the items are loaned to students to display at international exhibits at the University, he added.

Susan Aly, a student worker from Egypt, said "I like dealing with the people." She also said she enjoys telling everyone how things are made and is proud to talk to customers about her country.

"We have to know everything about every item in the shop and it helps me to learn about cultures," Aly said. She and her husband order more of the items from Egypt when they sell well. There is a transportation fee, but since things are bought wholesale it is still cheaper than most international shops, she said.

The shop also lets students apply basic economic theories such as supply and demand, Aly said.

Most of the customers are people who come into the art gallery, and some are high school students, Hallium said. "It's like a culture introduction," she added.

The merchandise is brought by students from Indonesia, Malaysia, Egypt, Turkey, Nepal, China, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Korea, Iran, and Guatemala, Hallium said.

Foreign markets hard to identify, Sununu says

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — The debate over the U.S. role in world trade mistakenly assumes domestic businesses can penetrate foreign markets as easily as the competition abroad made its mark here, New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu said Thursday.

"We assume and sometimes we berate ourselves for not making the decisions our international competitors made. They made the easy decision," Sununu told a national meeting in San Antonio of the Small Business Administration's legislative conference on small business issues.

The U.S. marketplace is homogenous, with readily discernible wants and needs, said Sununu, chairman of the National Governors' Association.

"It is easy to sell into that kind of market. Our industries recognize that and they sell comfortably at home," he said.

Foreign markets, on the other hand, are more diverse and difficult to identify, Sununu said.

"If they want to market (abroad), they have to be able to respond not to a market, but to many markets," he said. "That message is not well communicated."

Federal and state government can aid businesses by serving as a "repository and exchange mechanism" for filtering information about foreign markets to domestic businesses eager to establish a base abroad, he said.

As representatives of states, Sununu said governors leading trade delegations abroad should focus more on small businesses that do not have the clout of large corporations.

Gymnasts jump into action at Husky Mixed Pairs Invite

By Jim Black
Staff Writer

Two Saluki gymnasts will get an early start on the season at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Husky Mixed Pairs Invitational at Northern Illinois in DeKalb.

The meet will feature 12 teams, each consisting of one male and one female gymnast.

Junior Brent Reed and sophomore Marcus Mulholland will team with Illinois State gymnasts Jill Holmebeck and Ann Chester. SIU-C does not have a women's gymnastics team.

The regular season begins Dec. 4 at the Big Eight Invitational in Lincoln, Neb.

Coach Bill Meade said, "This will be a fun meet for the guys, but it will also help prepare them for the Big Eight Invitational. It's good training because there will be some pressure on them."

"They'll have a good time but they better do well because they always have to come back and tell me how they did."

Reed was the Salukis' top horizontal bar performer last year with an average score of 9.25. He averaged 53.51 in the all-around. Mulholland averaged 53.05 in the all-around.

Gymnasts from Illinois-Chicago, Western Illinois and Illinois State will also participate in the meet.

Parade Magazine All-Americans and three "Miss Basketballs."

"Freshmen are freshmen, but they're going to be tough," Beck said.

"We can't get film on their new personnel, but we think Georgia will do the same things they did last year," Beck said.

Georgia is a big team that likes to use the full-court press on defense. Its trademark is getting the ball up the floor as quickly as possible and looking for the fast break, Beck said.

"We're working on things that we know teams will be throwing at us all year, particularly the press," Beck said.

Preseason All-Conference Gateway pick Bridgett Bonds has been moved from power forward to small forward and Mary Berghuis, another All-Conference pick takes over at the power forward spot. Cathy Kampwerth will handle the center position.

Defensive ace Dana Fitzpatrick will handle off-guard duties.

Junior Tonda Seals, sophomore Eileen Richardson and John A. Logan transfer Deanna Sanders are battling for the point-guard job.

Seals is quicker and a good outside shooter, but Sanders excels at ball handling and has showed herself to be a serious three-point shot-maker.

The Saluki bench strength shows good depth with Regina Banks and Deanna Kibelkis at the ready.

"We've got a lot of bumps and bruises and we're beat up. We're ready to put some of that abuse on opposing players," Beck said.

The Amana Tournament wraps up play Saturday Nov. 29.

possible to keep the ball out of Bernhard's hands. We just can't let her get into a greatly dominating role where she's getting the ball with the greatest of ease."

But Bernhardt, team record holder with 1,141 assists, is not the whole picture. McCann has the school's single-season kill record with 436, and reserve Denise Cuttall leads the team with 110 blocks.

Northern Iowa's West Gym will not be the site of the tournament because the ceiling is six-inches under NCAA regulation height. Instead, games will be played at the NU High School Fieldhouse.

"It's awkward," Ahrabi-Fard said. "They're taking our home advantage away from us. Six inches doesn't make a difference."

good." Sinou thinks she hampered her performance in the regional meet by being too uptight before the race, but this race should be different.

"I feel much calmer (than before the regionals)," Sinou said. "I feel really relaxed."
